ACCORD

THE AFRICAN CENTRE FOR THE CONSTRUCTIVE RESOLUTION OF DISPUTES

Foreword

In 1993 the African Centre for the Constructive Resolution of Disputes (ACCORD) started a series of circulars to 83 universities in 23 countries of Africa with the purpose of promoting the academic development of conflict resolution. Encouraging feedback received from various universities was included in subsequent circulars. In 2001 ACCORD sent its 5th circular to 145 universities. By that time, 32 universities in 13 countries had shared what they were doing in this very relevant field in terms of teaching, research and community service.

In 2002 the Costa Rica-based University for Peace (UPEACE) began extending its programmes to other regions of the world and assigned top priority to the development of education and research activities in Africa. The UPEACE Africa Programme and ACCORD mailed a letter and questionnaire to 361 academic institutions and 97 non-governmental organisations across Africa. UPEACE also sent Consultative Missions to ten African countries and organised, in Maputo, a widely representative Advisory Meeting on Education for Peace in Africa. Based on all these meetings and all the returned questionnaires a Five Year Action Plan to Strengthen Education for Peace in Africa was finalised. In 2003 follow-up letters and reply forms were circulated and more feedback was received.

Such valuable and encouraging information should obviously be shared and propagated as widely as possible. A database was therefore compiled covering 121 departments in 109 institutions in 34 African countries and is herewith made available to all who are interested. At the same time an invitation is extended to everyone working in this field to constantly help us keep this database as updated as possible. Corrections, changes and additions are welcome and may be submitted by using the reply form in annex II.

Please be assured of our sincere appreciation for your commitment and co-operation, and of our best wishes for your continued efforts at integrating peace and security related issues into curricula across the African continent.

Ms. Ameenah Payne
Africa Programme Coordinator, UPEACE

Mr. Senzo Ngubane
Research Manager, ACCORD

Community service

SPL has held many workshops since its foundation in 1995. These workshops were focusing on the following topics: 1- Promotion of social consensus on the rules of Somali political life 2- Community empowerment through civic education, training and advocacy. 3- Encouragement of the local coping mechanisms and confidence building community initiatives, such as community policing, militia re-integration to their respective communities without a comprehensive demobilisation programme, etc. 4- Preservation of Somali culture SPL has been involved in a major Somalia Reconciliation Conference in Arta, Djibouti, 2000, and is involved in the ongoing Somali National Reconciliation Conference, as a resource people and as a catalyst. Certificates have been given to all who participated in the above-mentioned workshops. Fifty-five schools have been given trainings on Conflict Resolution. Most of the participants were civic education teachers, principals and parents' committee members. At the end of the course, SPL has produced a booklet on Peace Culture with the aim of teaching Somali students the advantages of co-existence and tolerance and divert them from anti-social behaviour (culture of violence).

Post-graduate Conflict Resolution and Peace Studies Programme (about 30 students, of whom about 10 are from other African countries), with the following key themes: Conflict Analysis, Philosophy and Practice of Non-violence, Peacemaking and Conflict Resolution, Educating for Peace. The programme is done largely by distance education, but full-time, on-campus study is also possible.

Certificates/Diplomas awarded

This programme leads to a B.A. Hons. or an M.A. in Conflict Resolution and Peace Studies.

Research

Individual staff who are part of the programme are actively involved in research on themes such as Demilitarisation, Reducing Violence against Women, Reducing Violence in Schools, Ethnicity and Violence.

Community service

Many of the individuals teaching in the programme are involved in peace-related community service (e.g. violence prevention in schools), but this is not part of the programme.

Additional Information

Beginnings of a scholarship fund. Particular success in attracting teachers to the programme, and refugees currently living in South Africa (for instance from Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of Congo).

Peace-related themes in general courses

Specific peace-related modules, courses, training

The course, Educating for peaceful change, is an elective in the second year of study and is equivalent to a first year university course. The first part is about Analysing Conflict, Understanding Peace, with sub-sections on Peace and sustainable livelihoods, Peace and personal development, Alternatives to Violence Project, and Defining and analysing conflict. The second part is about Strategies for Peaceful Change, with sub-sections on Foundational skills in conflict resolution, Negotiation, Mediation, The Zwiethemba Model, and Educating for peaceful change. Positive and negative peace are linked with issues of social and environmental justice and human rights. The emphasis on participatory development within a sustainable livelihoods framework is very strong, giving coherence to the whole course. Gender relations and the environment, holistic peace and issues of governance and citizenship are also key frames of reference. The course provides foundational skills in the creative transformation of conflict, aims to equip participants with the skills to pass their learning on to others, and is specific to the context of community educators and development workers.

Certificates/Diplomas awarded

The course contributes 32 credits to the 128 credit Certificate in Education (Participatory Development).

Research

Research on sustaining peace education initiatives. A chapter, 'Growing peace - towards sustainable peace education in the Midlands of KwaZulu-Natal' for a forthcoming volume on 'Sustained Peace Education for Social Cohesion in International Conflict and Post-Conflict Societies'. A list of 13 other publications since 1990: articles, chapters, an occasional paper, a guide, and reports of research projects.

Community service

The course is also offered non-formally as two five-day residential workshops supplemented by a year-long follow-up and support programme. Short refresher workshops for students in the follow-up support phase of the programme. Participants in the non-formal programme who qualify may register formally for the University-accredited modules as part of the Higher Certificate in Education (Participatory Development). Collaboration with the Alternatives to Violence Project (AVP) schools programme: Help Increase the Peace Project (HIPP), with a view to introducing peace education workshops in local schools, is in the initial stages. Contributing to co-ordinating peace efforts among various stakeholders in the communities concerned. A weekly adult education supplement, 'Learn with Echo', to a local daily newspaper, The Natal Witness. Reaches in excess of 300 000 readers weekly. Content is not always peace-related, but the publication covers issues such as democracy, health and welfare, human rights and culture.

Additional Information

Prof Francois Retief, Rector, responded to ACCORD's 1st circular in 1993, and Mr D. Uys, Director: Personnel, provided the following information:

Communication Science: Public and political communication as themes addressed in undergraduate and postgraduate courses. A Centre for Community Communication envisaged. Political Science: Negotiations and conflict resolution are specific themes in undergraduate courses, and techniques in negotiations a theme in a postgraduate course. Three students doing master's degrees in negotiations and conflict resolution. Anthropology: Undertaking transcultural research with regard to family and work values, and cultural change, as well as developmental research. Historical and Comparative Education: Student enrolled for masters' degree with dissertation entitled 'The need for the training of principals in conflict management in Lebowa'. Public Administration: A Local Government Training Programme for Capacity Building in the Orange Free State designed by the Department of Public Administration in conjunction with the Southern and Northern Free State Civic Organisations and IDASA. The development of negotiation skills and the management of conflicts and change have been identified as separate modules in the programme. A fundamental need exists for some kind of cooperation between a centre such as ACCORD and the Department. Old Testament: Prof S D Snyman doing research on a project entitled 'Geweld as teologiese probleem - 'n perspektief uit pre-eksiliese projekte van die Ou Testament' (Violence as a theological problem - a perspective from pre-exilic projects of the Old Testament).

Research

The first of three phases of a research project (in collaboration with CSIW, Washington, D.C.) on Tribal Conflict and Conflict Resolution in Five States in West and Southern Sudan has been completed. Students do research on the psychological, socio-economic, environmental and nutritional impacts of war and peace on different communities. Results of research are disseminated through seminars, lectures and participation in conferences. Examples of conference papers: A Culture of Peace in Sudan: Introducing the Idea of Recognizing and Apologizing for the Horrors committed in War, Future Perspectives for Sudanese Women's Role in Peace Building. A book was published in 1998 on Sudan between Peace and War: IDP in Khartoum, Southern and Western Kordofan.

Community service

A series of seminars, lectures and short training workshops on Peace Building and Conflict Resolution. Examples of specific workshop topics: Women and Peace, The Role of Women in Sustaining Peace in Sudan. A Reproductive Health Project provides medical and counselling services to displaced communities. Students perform various art, musical, dance and poetry activities during the celebration of international events. Benefiting groups include women, men and youth in decision-making positions, governmental and non-governmental institutions, universities, ministries and media.

Training of Trainers in Human Rights and Good Governance.

Certificates/Diplomas awarded

BA in Ethics and Development Studies, MA in Development Studies, Diploma and Associate BA in Democracy and Development Studies, Postgraduate Diploma in Good Governance and Civil Society. Students' research as part of the requirements for different awards has focused on: The conflict in northern Uganda, its root causes and solutions, Gender related conflicts, Poverty related conflicts.

Community service

The CEMS has six series of Training of Trainers in: Human Rights and Good Governance; Background to training with an overview covering Human Rights; Civil Society Organisations; Good Governance; Local Government in Uganda; The Meaning of a Human Rights-Based Approach to Local Government.

Additional Information

Uganda Martyrs University has no full-fledged programmes on peace-related studies and has no programme with that nomenclature, but has many undergraduate and post-graduate courses dealing with good governance, ethics, development, civil society and human rights. The IEIDS is considering establishing a unit which will streamline these courses to focus more specifically on peace and conflict studies. The Associate BA in Democracy and Development Studies, which is a distance-learning programme, also addresses peace and conflict-related issues.

Additional Information

Dr A.A. Mahdi, Acting Director, Institute of Human Relations, responded to ACCORD's 1st circular in 1993 and mentioned the following: Mr Edgar Bwalya, research fellow at the Institute of Human Relations, had done a short course on Conflict Resolution at Uppsala University, and was then doing his PhD programme in the Department of Peace Studies at Bradford University. During 1993 a well-attended series of public lectures was held on current African conflicts and attempts to find peaceful solutions. Topics were, for example: The role of Nigeria in conflict resolution in Africa in the 1990s and beyond (by the Nigerian High Commissioner to Zambia) Peace projects in Southern Sudan (by the Sudanese Ambassador to Zambia) The merger between the Preferential Trade Area (PTA) and the Southern African Development Community (by the Secretary General to the PTA). Peace prospects in Somalia Pre-election violence and methods of dispute resolution in Africa were already included in their research agenda.
